

Strengthen your organization's key leadership skills in an intense and versatile digitally learning universe.

Atlas Healthcare is a practice-oriented learning experience for leadership development. The training is tailored to match a range of the healthcare sector's major challenges in times of decreasing resources, increasing complexity, and new citizen expectations.

Atlas Healthcare is a digital simulated learning universe designed to develop leaders capable of exercising balanced management of activities, values, behavior, and motivation all while focusing on the primary task and the patient as a healthcare partner.

Atlas Healthcare uses meaningful performance management, management of effective and efficient teams, and management of cross-functional cooperation and innovation to train managers' abilities to navigate between short-term KPIs and long-term development.

Atlas Healthcare is a leadership 'heat' experience. All participants get hands-on experience, training and development of their leadership skills and leadership style. The training combines a digital and analogue learning universe with real-time interactions, feedback, and transfer processes.

Atlas Healthcare combines the most recent theory and methods with real-time training in a digital management simulation

A complete learning experience: The learning experience mixes brief inspirational presentations with practical management tools, direct real-time training and feedback in a practice-oriented management simulation, as well as transfer processes to pull the learning back to organizational everyday practice.

Digital employees: Each participant utilizes a digital device to lead a digital employee, whom they need to develop, motivate, and incite to perform. All digital employees are different in character and will respond differently to, as well as provide different feedback on, leadership behavior.

Multi-level management: There are three organizational management levels integrated in the simulation: digital employees, real-life middle managers – and leaders of managers. Participants get hands-on insight into what is required of managers at the different levels of the management pipeline.

Learn. Train. Get feedback: Theory and practice are interconnected in the simulation. Participants are inspired with cutting edge leadership models, then try them out in practice and get direct feedback on learning and behavior from the digital employee and their colleagues.

Leadership development through real emotions, deep reflection, and true behavioral changes

Atlas Healthcare works with groups from 16 to 42 managers. Participants are divided into departments. The teams must succeed in reaching their own goals, but at the same time they need to collaborate and depend on each other in order to succeed.

"It was great to get that experience and feedback in a context where it is not 'life and death', but still involves a lot of adrenaline and intensity. It's the strongest learning experience I have had for a very long time."

"It really gets to you. It is in your fingers, in your feelings, in your head, your feet and your relations."
